Kituo Cha Sheria from the 20th-27th May, 2018 conducted a series of legal aid clinics in Kitale, Endebess, Kambi-Suwerwa and Eldoret in Trans-Nzoia and Uasin Gishu Counties.

The activities were undertaken by legal officers from Kituo in partnership with local Volunteer Advocates based in the 2 Counties for the empowerment and building of capacity of indigent clients through provision of legal aid services. Kituo further partnered with the Volunteer Advocates in identifying and formulating other legal issues in the areas for future action through strategic litigation and other means of intervention.

Kituo has also been involved in Alternative Justice Systems (AJS) activities within Endebess and the surrounding areas with an aim of providing a safe space in order to address the past, the present and possible future conflicts through a participatory approach that incorporates dialogue, builds trust as well as capacity building. This process has helped the IDPs, victims, stakeholders and host communities to identify their strengths as well as their capacity to transform into a stage of self-mobilization. This component was also incorporated in the activities that took place in Endebess and Kambi-Suwerwa.

Kituo has noted that more often clients from fur-flung areas of the country travel to our Nairobi offices seeking legal services. It is for this reason that Kituo sought to revamp and energize the Volunteer Advocates' scheme in the Counties of Trans-Nzoia and Uasin Gishu in order to ensure better access to justice by residents.

Kituo continues to engage and recruit volunteer advocates in almost all the 47 counties in Kenya to assist the organization reach its clientele from these far-flung areas. The activities were led by the legal team of Rhoda Maina and Ephraim Kayere.

Success Story - Mary Runyangi Muchafu

Mary Runyangi Muchafu (centre) receives her cheque from Kituo's advocate Ephraim Kayere at the Head Office as Jairo Sila looks on

Mary Runyangi Muchafu is a middle-aged Kenyan woman who came to Nairobi over a decade in pursuit of gainful employment. Mary is an honest and hardworking Kenyan who worked as a domestic worker in the leafy suburb of Lavington, Nairobi while living in Kawangware.

The mother of five (5) was contracted on the 22nd November, 2016 and performed her duties with loyalty and diligence until 6th December, 2017 when her employer; one Mariama Sieh unfairly fired her. Mary was dismissed in the most unfair manner without any notice being given to her or receiving her terminal dues. Lost and confused on how to handle this most unfair predicament; Mary was contemplating taking her school going children back to their rural home as her prospects of supporting them in her current state looked grim.

Fortunately, when she narrated her story to a friend in the neighbourhood who also works as a security guard in the suburbs of Nairobi; there was a glimmer of hope. The friend happened to have received pro bono legal representation from Kituo Cha Sheria in a similar matter previously. Mary had worked for the entire duration of her employment without leave including during public holidays and was instead met with threats of dismissal any time she requested a day off. Mary instead toiled in the Mariama household taking care of 4 children until the day she was dismissed and now was presenting her matter to a Kituo legal officer.

Once her case was reviewed and deemed meritorious; a demand letter was immediately served to her former employer clearly stating the employer's unjustified actions in four points- salary in lieu of notice; annual leave; service pay and compensation for unfair termination according to Kenya's labour laws.

The employer did not respond to the demand within the stipulated time and instead rubbished Mary's claim with more threats and scare tactics that she'd instead end up paying the employer.

Kituo's legal officers acting on mandatory instructions to institute legal proceedings from the client were ready to proceed to court and had duly served the employer when through their legal counsel they offered to settle the claim out of Court.

The offer being acceptable to our client- Mary Runyangi received a full and final settlement of Ksh. 32,000 in April, 2018.

A very thankful Mary who has since found employment elsewhere was grateful to all Kituo officers who assisted her in her pursuit of justice saying, "Nimesaidika! Asanteni sana", she said.

Kituo and Partners train Nairobi County Law Enforcement Officers on Refugee Protection

Nairobi County law enforcement officers during the training by the Forced Migration Program (FMP) officers

Kituo Cha Sheria through the Forced Migration Office in collaboration with the International Rescue Committee (IRC), the United Nations High Commission for Refugees (UNHCR) and the Refugee Affairs Secretariat (RAS) conducted training for Government Officials mainly charged with the responsibility of law enforcement on protection of refugees. The two days training took place at the Silver Springs Hotel, Nairobi from the 26th-27th June, 2018. Among those taking part in the training are various government administration officers including assistant county commissioners, chiefs and assistant chiefs being trained on protection of refugees. The enthralling refugee law workshop with the government officials was particularly meant to sensitize them on refugee protection. The officers constructively exchanged ideas and views which can hopefully address relevant issues especially at the refugee camp level.

The workshop mainly aimed at strengthening knowledge and further awareness on the fundamentals of refugee protection, documentation issued to asylum-seekers/refugees, detention, Court practices in Kenya and others which impact the lives of refugees in the country. Kituo Cha Sheria thanks to our partners IRC, RAS and UNHCR-Kenya for their partnership in the training.

Kituo Conducts Legal Aid Clinic in Kayole, Nairobi

Joan Nyongesa, Kituo advocate attending to a group of clients during the legal aid clinic held in Kayole, Nairobi

Kituo Cha Sheria through the Forced Migration Programme (FMP) on 16th of May 2018 held a Legal Aid Clinic at the Universal Pentecostal Church Mission in Kayole targeting the refugee community living around the estate.

The objectives of the clinic were to inform participants on the role of Kituo Cha Sheria in protection and promotion of refugee rights in the country, sensitize clients on by – laws, upcoming World Refugee Day in June, educate refugees on work and business permits and how to obtain them, screen clients as well as listening to individual legal issues at the end of the session.

These efforts were premised on the obligation to protect refugees in the country, in addition to alleviating their plight. A total of 86 clients with various legal issues were attended to.

Kituo attends the International Refugee Congress 2018

Participants of the International Refugee Congress, 2018 in Istanbul, Turkey

Kituo Cha Sheria attended the International Refugee Congress, 2018 in Istanbul, Turkey. The International Refugee Congress took place from the 10th-11th May 2018 in Istanbul, Turkey and brought together organizations that are working on refugee issues around the world. Kituo Cha Sheria was represented at the Congress by the Forced Migration Program (FMP) coordinator, Ms. Clara Barasa.

The congress aimed to develop joint policy positions on issues pertaining to refugees such as access to basic services, legal rights and sustainable solutions. It also facilitated a platform whereby policy recommendations that have so far been jointly explored and discussed by refugee-led and host community organizations through an extensive consultation process were shared, discussed and finalized. The congress resulted in a communiqué, which represented the shared views of all participants on policy options that could potentially address issues of concern for refugees and host communities. The communiqué also supported civil society efforts to influence policy and program decisions for the benefit of refugees and the communities that host them.

The priority issues, as identified through the consultation process, are not domestic issues only relevant for refugees in a particular country. Although many of them might need solutions that are specific to a particular context, these priorities and needs are global in scope and scale, and thus require collective global responsibility and action. For that reason, the International Refugee Congress aimed to create policy options and recommendations in an inclusive manner with participation from a variety of regions, countries, and organizations. Kituo Cha Sheria's FMP coordinator had the opportunity to discuss, share Kituo's program and influencing experiences, compare program approaches and strategies; and learn from other Congress participants.
